Fire Insurance plans online

Some of the Community Archives' most frequently-used items are the fire insurance maps produced by the Charles E. Goad Company between 1878 and 1957. These plans represent the buildings in existence at the time the map was produced. They were updated with patches showing later changes. They are useful for determining the history of particular properties and showing changes in communities over time.

This extract from the Belleville map of 1878 shows the current location of the Community Archives at the northwest corner of Campbell and Pinnacle streets. In 1878, this site was the home of the city's Opera House (the pink and blue show that the building was constructed of brick and stone). This building was destroyed by fire in April 1880 and a small patch was added to the map, noting that only 'burnt ruins' remained.

The plans for Belleville from 1878, 1888, 1904, 1915 and 1942 and for Deseronto from 1893 have now been photographed and you can find them online through the Community Archives' Flickr account at <https://goo.gl/FefFmY>.

Senior of the Year

Volunteer Lorna Garbutt has been working four days a week at the Community Archives since 2009 and is a knowledgeable, thorough, and highly-valued member of the team here. She has spent many hours listing our newspaper and map collection.

In June her hard work was recognized by the City of Belleville when they awarded her the Senior of the Year award for 2017.

Congratulations, Lorna!!!

What's in the Display Case?
